Trade Board Proceed With Plans For July 1st

WILL INCREASE HORSE RACES AND PRIZE MONEY. B.F. HARTLEY WILL BE IN CHARGE OF RACES.

MUSIC BOX

While the Bassano Board of Trade at their meeting in the Royal Castle on Wednesday, moved to cancel, for this year at least, the bucking and roping events of the annual first of July celebration, they have added many more new attractions and have increased the prize money in several events.

A committee of opinion now is at the local hospitals with a much better opportunity to compete since the professional riders and horses will not attend in such large numbers as has previously been the case.

Horse races will include the Free-for-all, relay races, novelty races, stake races, etc. Bucking and roping the Indians will be offered as a special prize for the Indian painted Indian, provided there are three or more Indians painted. Also there will be Saddle horse races half mile.

Ladies each half mile. Show races, relay races, girls race, and it is stipulated that the girls will not enter this race must ride their own ponies. Bonan race, Charlott race, half mile, and a special prize will be offered here for the best designated chariot. Wrestling on the back and other sports will also be held.

Th carnival and dance will be held as usual in the evening and Len Davis orchestra from Calgary will supply the music for both the dance.

While no committees have as yet been appointed, it is understood that B. F. Hartley and Sid Rodhouse will be in charge of the horse races.

Further information will appear in the Recorder as the various attractions are decided upon by the Board of Trade.

Gem Junior Red Cross Have Successful Year

The Gem Junior Red Cross under the leadership of Miss K. V. Verner, has raised $1,401.51. This money, plus a $100.00 dollar sum was sent to the National Junior Red Cross War Fund together with twenty-five dollars which was donated to the Red Cross. The Junior members have worked hard in this drive to help the Red Cross. They have been in tents and wagons, they are collecting salvage from the homes in the community, scrap iron, rags, paper, bone, rubber, and other articles necessary for war purposes.

The sponsored by the Junior Red Cross were sent a large amount of money and made up to help the Gem Junior Red Cross to be very entertaining and successful. At a later date a Silver Tea was served by the members. There was also a sale of polished hand painted fans, which the members had hand painted since their organization. Their outstanding achievement was the making of a very beautiful patchwork quilt. This members of the Junior Red Cross wish to express their appreciation to Mrs. Samuels for helping them put this big organization together.

The success of this organization with its large membership in credit ed to their president Beverly Samuels and their secretary-treasurer Shirley Viles and to the fine cooperation of the members who are so willing to "serve".

MEL MILROY TO COLLECT SCRAP

Canada's farmers are being asked to come to the rescue in the nation's need of scrap metal for war purposes and the farmers in Bassano and district are asked to do their part in the collection of these valuable war materials.

To help meet this challenge, to the farmers in this community, Mr. Milroy, International Harvester Co. agent has arranged that all scrap metal, except scrap steel, to which all farmers may bring their scrap materials that they have on the farm. The metals brought into the depot will be shipped as fast as possible to the war factories turning out tanks, guns and planes.

Mr. Milroy has arranged that all scrap brought into him will be sold through the established salvage channels. The farmer will be reimbursed for the full amount that his scrap brings, unless he wishes to turn the proceeds over to the Red Cross.

Mr. Milroy will be in touch with his sources and that of his stores as a "patriotic duty."

There is enormous piles of scrap on the farms and unless this scrap starts to move steel mills will run dry. The public is asked to help the war effort by turning in scrap.

Remember that each pound of scrap metal you bring in to the depot will be worth two pounds of steel to help Canada's enemies with powder behind it.

Bring your scrap materials into the depot now!

Mr. Milroy has arranged that all scrap that is delivered to him will be delivered airmail to Hitler and Hirohito.

Southern Ireland, Green and Neutral Lives In Constant Fear Of Invasion

This is the 15th of a series of stories about a trip to London and return, taken by a group of Canadian newspaper men at the invitation of the British Government. It is written by Hugh Templer, who represented the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association.

Every day of the six weeks or more spent away from home provided something new and different, but nothing was quite so unexpected as a two day holiday in neutral Eire or Southern Ireland. It was not by choice of mine. I would rather it had been Scotland, but this short peaceful interlude in the only part of the Empire which stayed neutral, was not unpleasant, but I longed for home.

It was a Tuesday afternoon when I left London, along with seven other Canadian editors. Our hosts put us on the train and bade us godspeed, sending us away with more present—this time envelopes with enlarged pictures of ourselves during our travels in England.

The night was never to be forgotten. Two huge German land mines floated down out of the air and arrived in Boulogne at the same time as we did. That experience has been discussed more fully in another of these stories.

I was up on a stretcher, having slept fearfully on a bare floor, in spite of the rations of tea and biscuits, broken glass, and the street in the darkness. There was some difficulty about shaving in a bathroom full of broken glass and with only a drab of cold, dusty water from a tap, but the landlady manager of the wrecked hotel did her best to give me a shave to get me the best breakfast I had while in Britain.

The British Overseas Airways car picked me up at the hotel and drove through streets of stores without glass in the windows and passed English cottages looking out on the channel, to Poole.

The next morning, we were given one more long, quiet breakfast in the deck of the ship, the air raid sirens began to wail again. The natives looked on with some suspicion. Air raid had been scarce in those parts, but this was the second in as many days. But I did not share their idea that the few German bombers could not be stopped by the German air force.

The constable, a veteran of the last war, said that had started to go to the British Isles in the British Active Fleet. They slip into Ulster to see a foot ball game and forget to come back.

And down in the village pub one night, Grattan O'Leary of Ottawa, a pure blooded Irishman of the third generation in Canada, stepped in the door and poetry of Ireland was recited on our native soil in English. He said that Hitler was the Cromwell of today, going about burning churches. I missed that speech, but I know how eloquent Grattan can be and I was surprised that he had the mettle of Adare all anxious to enlist at once against this modern destroyer of religions.

The Thatched Picture Village

I have said that the village constable thought Adare the most beautiful spot in the world. That statement needs to be amplified.

The bus took that us to Adare drew up in front of a picture house. The Dunraven Arms. The constable said: "We are a tiny hamlet, like Adare did with a large inn like that was something of a mystery until I learned that it belonged to Lord Dunraven in peace time to accommodate his hunting parties. Now it houses the passengers flying over the broad Atlantic. In the pages of the regular newspaper, the constable said, it was said that Dunraven had a hunting party in Adare.

In those days for us, stranded in what was called the spar compartment of the ship, I was all alone in a fair-sized room, full of baggage and sacks of mail. The seat was comfortable, and the steward came and served an excellent meal on light plastic dishes. But though we flew for two hours and a half over what is probably the most interesting scenery, I saw nothing at all: the two windows were painted over with thick black paint.

I hadn't realized, on the trip from New York to Lisbon to England, how difficult it is to travel around wartime Europe. In a way that was little short of miraculous, as I learned later, the British Council had worked out a difficult solution on the trip.

The return voyage wasn't quite so easy. As I sat alone in the spar compartment of the high "Champion" I read a little booklet issued to wartime travellers by the British Overseas Airways, and marvelled that I had got out of England at all.

Our ship was to stop in Lisbon and take off for Portugal. The next morning, I would be in Lisbon and by Sunday, I would be home in Canada—or so I thought.

Truth The Emerald Isle

It was early afternoon when the green ship glided down to the water so quickly that there wasn't even a noise in the ears. I stepped out into the daylight again.

We were in the estuary of the Shannon River at Foynes, Ireland. On the river bank, two hundred yards away was a big concrete and timber pier, with a neat little customs house at the land end. Behind that were two or three buildings where a couple of railway trucks were being loaded with peat. On both sides of the pier were two or three small houses, every one had been described. See, this was Ireland!

I never ceased to admire the fast launches of the British Overseas Airways. It took only a few minutes to reach land. The wait in the customs house seemed unendurable, but when it was over, the place it was brief and infrequent. I stepped in green to a check marks on my brief case and clutch bag, already decorated with an imposing array of airline stickers and official seals. Then made one more entry in my passport.

None of us knew that we were to stay overnight in Ireland instead of going on to Lisbon. When an official broke the news we did not like it. The country-side was green enough but it uninviting.

Two modern buses waited outside. The only thing unusual was the name of the company printed in two languages, English and the strange old text of the Gaelic language. Not till then did I realize that Southern Ireland was bilingual. "Sure," says an Irishman, "we can be literate in two languages now." I was to spend the night here, the roads were winding and narrow, with walls along each side and plenty of stones still left in the fields. The tiny whitewashed cottages were picturesque but poor. By the time we pulled into Adare, the speedometer must have indicated thirty miles at least.

Later that night I walked with B. E. Mcleod out the back of the hotel, a French-Canadian, past an old Norman Tower, now part of Catholic church, past ancient trees with six-foot trunks, and on down the main street of the village. The chief was full of Irish lore and a bit of a poet. He said that Adare was the most beautiful village in the whole world. Probably he's right.

A Strange and Ancient People

I had come from England where the people were fighting for their very lives and for the freedom of the world. Here, next door, was Ireland, not only neutral but refusing even the use of ports to fight against Hitler. These Irish still enjoy the privileges of Empire.

I came away with the feeling that Ireland is beautiful and the Irish people are kindly, hospitable but beyond the understanding of a Canadian with Scottish blood. Here in sweet Adare, the Irish people did not seem to care if Canada was going to win or lose the world today. They lived in the past. One might have thought that Cromwell had come way just last year and laid waste the old Black Abbey and the Franciscan Abbey and the White Abbey, not forgetting Desmond Castle, down by the stone bridge over the river.

Of course, De Valera boasts that Ireland will defend itself against any attack from any source. It's rather pitiful. Down by the bridge there were some tank traps. At least that was evidently what they were intended to be. A Bren gun carrier might have some difficulty in knocking them down, a driver of a medium tank would have no trouble.

In the last two weeks in England, the army had been on maneuvers. The sight was impressive. In Poole too, the army held maneuvers. Word had been sent to Adare to have food enough on hand on Friday for a couple of battalions, but they did not come. The constable had to go to the station to get food. Asked why they didn't come on Friday, the colonel said it rained that day, so they postponed the exercises. Apparently the Irish don't realize yet that modern war don't stop because it rains.

But though De Valera may speak of repelling any enemy, the people of Ireland know their danger, and they know that themselves are to be repelled. I talked with the matrons at the golf course, and they asked if I thought Hitler was going to attack Ireland. I wasn't very hopeful. One of them said she had three little boys at home.

The constable, a veteran of the last war, said that had started to go to the British Isles in the British Active Fleet. They slip into Ulster to see a foot ball game and forget to come back.

And down in the village pub one night, Grattan O'Leary of Ottawa, a pure blooded Irishman of the third generation in Canada, stepped in the door and poetry of Ireland was recited on our native soil in English. EARLY CARE SAVERS WORK

In many parts of Canada the Spring has been unusually early this year, and after a little dry weather has turned exceedingly damp. This produces ideal conditions for growth, unfortunately appreciated as much by the weeds as by the vegetables, flowers and grass. If unchecked the garden will soon be overrun by these enemies and the plants one is trying to grow will either be choked out or become so spindly that they are of little value. The gardener must be prepared to deal with such situations. Cultivation and weeding as soon after a rain as the soil is fit to work will produce wonders, when the soil is dry and the plants are well rooted, even long rooted weeds are pulled out from among vegetables and flowers, and out of lawns and drive ways. Cultivation at this time, too, is worth twice what a few days later. It is not worth the trouble to pull out weeds, but it is not worth the trouble to pull out weeds.

TRANPLANTING

Sooner or later the gardener runs up against the problem of where flower seeds have been sown too close together, for filling in blanks where plants are out.

In blocks where plants are killed by frost or heat, or when the soil is too wet, this process is necessary.

The secret of successful transplanting is water, shade and fertilizer. The beginner is advised to expose roots to the air as soon as possible, then pull them out and shade from the sun for a day or two. Most experienced gardeners do their transplanting on a

BUY WINTER COAL NOW

Buy your winter coal now and avoid suffering later. This was the gist of a message issued by Premier Aberhart this week after he received a communication from the Federal Government stating that demands on labor and transportation next fall and winter will make hazardous the mining and delivery of coal. Mr. Aberhart said, and it is imperative that miners be kept working now so as to avoid a shortage of fuel, and that an extension of the moratorium on mining may be necessary. The Premier said that it was understood the application of credit advances to the consumers was being considered by Ottawa authorities.

The following communication is from the War Prices and Trade Regional Office at Edmonton: "The new regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board require that human interests will have to take first place over profits in the world after the war. Please note that every church dignitary in support of the war effort has had his ways been approved by the privileged. But my suggestion that Christian principles should be applied to the economic system is another matter."

The fighting forces or had entered war industries and are now awaiting the resumption of the Alberta mines. Mr. Aberhart said: "If households will buy their coal now for next winter many of the mines will open up production will proceed at full capacity and when winter comes they will be better prepared to meet the heavier demands particularly from the outside markets."

Flax and Coarse Grains Production Needed as a War Measure

Farmers are urged by the Government to produce as much coarse grains and coarse grain are required for the production of livestock and dairy products, and flaxseed is urgently needed for its oil content.

TRUCK OWNERS TAKE NOTE

The following communication is from the War Prices and Trade Regional Office at Edmonton: "The new regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board require that human interests will have to take first place over profits in the world after the war. Please note that every church dignitary in support of the war effort has had his ways been approved by the privileged. But my suggestion that Christian principles should be applied to the economic system is another matter."

The fighting forces or had entered war industries and are now awaiting the resumption of the Alberta mines. Mr. Aberhart said: "If households will buy their coal now for next winter many of the mines will open up production will proceed at full capacity and when winter comes they will be better prepared to meet the heavier demands particularly from the outside markets."

Where a truck is being used as a freight vehicle, the "owner" may carry owners of family without compensation, a passenger or two, or "livestock," may carry not more than two owners of the livestock or passengers in his cab without obtaining a permit.

In all other cases he must not carry passengers without obtaining a permit from the Transport Officer. A permit will be granted to allow a truck owner to transport members of his family or employees upon essential business, where no other means of transportation are available. A permit may also be issued for carrying persons from a point on a train or bus or boat route, to their ultimate destination, where no other passenger vehicle is available. Under no circumstances will permits be granted to carry passengers on trucks to picnics, fairs, dances or other pleasure entertainments.

TO BEAUTIFY ALBERTA ROADS

NEW SUGAR RATION WILL NOT AFFECT CANNING, PRESERVING

Opening of spring offers full opportunity for highway beautification, providing that this is carried out on sound, safe practical lines. The planting of trees should not be done a scale that will impede the view of road curves and increase traffic hazards.

Last year it is recalled there was a strong movement to encourage the planting of trees along the Calgary Edmonton highway. Several of the towns took up this movement and gave a full endorsement. As it has been demonstrated in the United States the judicious planting of trees and road beautification is an attraction to tourists.

The Alberta Motor Association at Edmonton gave assistance to the planting of trees along a section of the main highway leading south.

In other provinces the department of public works have encouraged the planting of trees along the main highways. In the province of Quebec for example 1000 trees are planted in each mile of highway. The planting of trees and road beautification is a attraction to tourists.
